Church sees hope for M-E compromise

WASHINGTON (Reuter). — Senator Frank Church (Democrat, Idaho) said yesterday Israeli leaders assured him they were willing to compromise with the Arabs over territory captured in the 1967 war.

The Senator, who returned Monday from a week's trip to Israel, said: "I found in Israel a willingness to compromise in the interests of achieving a peace settlement, so long as Jerusalem is retained as the capital and there are secure borders."

He told reporters he felt that, "if the spirit of compromise emerges on the Arab side in the wake of the Russian withdrawal (from Egypt), then there is hope of progress toward a settlement."

But Senator Church added: "The longer negotiations are postponed, the greater the likelihood the de facto situation will harden perma-

new format these days

We know newspaper reading is a habit, and our readers have been used to the order of pages and make-up of the paper ever since we began publishing our daily editorial on the front page way back in the '50s.

Since then the paper has grown in stages from four to six pages daily and then from six to eight, and now we are printing ten to twelve pages at least three times a week. In an attempt to organize the presentation of our daily material better—news and features—we have moved the editorial to the back page, at the same time creating an Editorial Page with Readers' Letters, a summary of daily press comment and articles of opinion and background to the news, both local and foreign. At the same time the page before the last (either 7, 9 or 11, depending on the size of the paper) has been given over to business and finance, including an enlarged daily stock exchange

The page facing the business page contains the classified advertisements and the daily directory of events, broadcasting programmes, as well as emergency services, together with the popular Ferdnand cartoon in its usual place. The news pages now run consecutively from 1 to 5, with the Social & Personal Column leading Page 2, as before, but now headed by the daily weather report, which has been shifted from the back page.

In midweek, on Wednesday, we now have a Crossword Puzzle and a Bridge Column (in addition to these features in the Friday Magazine.) Other days there are features, including food and fashions, the Law Report, the Weekly Jewish Scene, and music and cinema reviews.

All this reading material is supplemented and illustrated with domestic and foreign (radio) news pictures, attractively reproduced on our new web offset press.

We hope that in the past few weeks our readers have become

A new modern school for teaching English has opened in Bournemouth, England

Ophir Tours (the representative of the Interlink School in Israel), has announced the opening of a new, modern school for teaching English, equipped with improved laboratories, modern teaching aids, and which employs the most modern pedagogic methods.

The Interlink School of English, Bournemouth's latest language school, opened the doors of its modern purpose-built premises at 126 Richmond Park Road on May 1 with a large complement of students from the Continent, Scandinavia. South America, and the Middle and Far East.

INTERLINK specialises in teaching English as a foreign language, and offers intensive courses throughout the year in periods of 2 to 50 weeks with new courses starting every month, and summer courses of 3-6 weeks starting every week from June to August. The tultion programme has been carefully devised to enable the student to learn the intricacies of the English language as rapidly and comprehensively as possible, using the latest techniques in teaching and teaching aids.

The light and alry classrooms, with their colourful decor and fitted carpeting, provide a pleasant background to the serious task of learning. Comfortable moulded chairs with writing-tops replace the conventional school desks and can be quickly rearranged for discussion groups, acted improvisations, play-readings, and other different methods of study. All classrooms are equipped with sound-reproduction systems for pre-recorded tape teaching, and the dusty blackboards of the past have been replaced by the new easy-wipe "magiboards".

The language laboratory is fitted with the latest recording and play-back equipment, together with a film projector for audio-visual presentations. All teaching material, including films and recorded tapes, has been specially prepared for INTERLINK to their own specifications so that the leasons in the classroom and language laboratory, together with the special lessons and lectures, all form one coordinated programme of study. Students receive up to 25 lessons per week, and may, in addition, enrol for evening classes in conversation practice and special subjects.

INTERLINK also has a centre in London where intensive courses are offered during the summer season only for students who prefer a London flavour with their studies. Experienced teachers, supported by streamlined computerised accounting and data processing systems, enable INTERLINK to provide high-quality tuition at a realistic price. Judging by the enthusiasm of the first intakes of students INTERLINK is already well on its way to becoming one of the town's leading schools of English.

The Head of Courses is Mr. Basil Lainsdale, educated locally and in London University, who has had considerable experience in teaching English as a foreign language. (Advt.)

When Shulamit starts thinking

By HOWARD BLAKE

SHULAMIT, our 18-year-old. of is practising thinking. She starts her last year of high school soon and Yigal Allon has scared her good. As Min-ister of Education he has announced that the matriculation exams will be changed starttests will be de-emphasized and the accent will be on a student's ability to think. Shu-lamit figures she's in trouble de-emphasized if she doesn't start now to get the hang of it.

"He didn't even give any sample thinking questions," she complained to her father.
"Well," I for-instanced, "instead of asking you to explain how Israel's electoral system works, which is memory they may ask you to system works, which is memory, they may ask you to explain why it doesn't, which is thinking. Or instead of asking you who defeated Napoleon at the Battle of Waterlioo, which is memory, maybe they'll ask you how you would have fought the battle if you had been Napoleon, which is thinking."

"How I would have fought the Battle of Waterloo?"
"That's just a sample of a think question off the top of my head," I said lamely. "They wouldn't ask you that. They wouldn't expect you to be a better general than Napoleon." Shulamit bristled. "Who said Napoleon was a good general? Napoleon was a good general? A general who loses the last battle is not a good general because the last battle is the only one that really counts. And suppose I did come up with a better battle plan than the one Napoleon used at Wa-terloo? If I'd have been Na-poleon I'd baye held backethe cavalry until my artillery got its licks in Instead he made them charge while Welling-ton's infantry was still in per-fect formation to mow them down. It was stupid."

"I wouldn't have done it that way either," I said. It's wonderful when a father and daughter have that kind of empathy.

O.K., but how would they know whether mine was a better plan or not? Who would mark my paper, Moshe Dayan?"

"Maybe I didn't give you very good examples of think questions," I apologized.
"I don't think you did either."
(More of that wonderful empathy.) "What's wrong with Israel's electoral system? Somebody very smart said that people get the kind of govern-ment they deserve and that's where the real problem is. In a democracy the people have to improve before you can im-prove the government. In the days of the monarchs they didn't have that problem.

There aren't many of them left, but the Shah of Iran seems to be giving his people the best government in the state.

whole Near East. Monarchy didn't fail, only the monarchs. Democracy can't fail, only the people. So I'm not so interested in improving the electoral system, it's the people I'm worried about." "You are certainly going to have to practise your thinking, Shulamit; it's very un-disciplined. Now you're not even answering the question. The exection was how to improve the electoral system and your answer is let's improve the people instead. You know what you'd get in the bacrut for an answer like that? A hig fat nought."

"I know. So what should I

"Practise! But first you have to understand what they're trying to do. Today it's not important any more to know how much two and two make. A computer can work that out for you in no time. Today the question is — what are you going to do about it?"
"Daddy, maybe thinking is just not for me."

"Not at all. You're very young and it just hasn't come to you yet. If you say things like Napoleon was stupid and Israelis don't deserve better government, they'll call you a fresh kid and you're going to flunk the finals. But there's a simmick you can use Whena gimmick you can use. When ever you're answering a think question, think to yourself, 'Never mind if I think I'm thinking, will whoever marks the answers think I'm think-ing? Because heaven help you kids when who-knows who kids when who-knows-who starts playing Lord Almighty and marking answers to think questions. And we've got to get you through high school. Shulamit, right?

"You said it, Daddy!"

WHAT'S A GAT' PARTY?

First, take some crisp and crunchy, dry roasted "GAT" almonds and peanuts. Add some piquant "GAT" olives. Then buy, beg or borrow some of those special "GAT" concentrated juices: grapefruit, orange or tomatoe juice... they are as different from ordinary drinks as cream is from milk.

Now, add to these "GAT" goodies a bottle of "MARTEFF" brandy, which makes people friendly quickly. Then bring along the people you want to be friendly with. And we can promise, you are going to have a nice party. A."GAT" party.

PUBLIC SERVICE STRUGGLE

there need not be a class war because Israel is governed by a group of workers' parties, La-bour Minister Almogi observed in an interview with a Jerusalem Post interviewer, published in the adjacent column.

Mr. Almogi has long been a protagonist of commonsense solutions achieved without too much heat and emotion, and in the thicket of labour party ideological formulas varying only a very little, but none the less bitterly fought over, this approach has often been valuable. He does not deny the class struggle, or the wage struggle, or the conflict of interests over the division of earnings between owners and employees. He does insist that cash wages are not the sole factor in living standards, which will always depend far more still on the health of the economy as a whole, which is directed by a group of labour parties that have the interests of the worker as its major consideration

Perhaps unintentionally, there rernaps unintentionally, there is here some imputed criticism of the methods and approaches of Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon, who has appeared more concerned, in recent months, to persuade groups of workers that the Histadrut will support them than to conwill support them than to consider the interests of the nation sider the interests of the nation as a whole, rather as though the Histadrut represents the workers, and the government some other group of people. Mr. Almogi was also quick to point out that the leadership of both bodies was not only elected by the same people, but on the same platform.

same platform. It is of particular interest that Mr. Almogi pointed out that it had been possible to conclude a large proportion of labour con-tracts in the private sector, but none had yet been concluded in the public sector. In the private, capitalist sector, at the Elite,

THERE is a class struggle but chocolate combine, for instance, which has been struck for some weeks now, it is relatively simple to arrive at an agreement. If what is asked by the workers is beyond the capacity of the industry to pay, the owners of the plant will not agree because their business would cease to be worth while. On the other hand, if the plant is not paying what it might, it will be in its interest to accept the workers' demands and get back to production that will still be worth while at higher costs. This is a simple market economy in which each element finds its own ievel.

But this does not apply to the teachers who have threatened to strike. No money in the world would be too much to pay for good education — except that it is only one of our necessities, with security, public housing, health, social welfare and other public needs. To solve this conundrum, the salaries of teachers are linked to those of engineers, except that their working conditions and chances of advancement are not com-

Of course classes should be smaller. Nobody can teach a class of 40 primary school children, including a few either from underprivileged homes or new immigrants who do not know Hebrew yet. The question is really whether the teachers can be the sole arbiters of how much money should be spent on education, and how much on other fields of public service. These are not labour relations in the strict sense, but questions of national finance.

Education Minister Allon is trying to avoid a strike by pro-posing an enquiry into teaching conditions, and it is to be hoped that the teachers will agree, be-cause it is not a question that can be solved by unilateral pres-who deny the existence of a class struggle," he told me. "This is a fact of life because there are conflicting interests, and there are legitimate demands for a fair share of the national cake. But this is not the same as class warfare," he stressed.

He developed his theme in keeping with traditional Labour Zionist ideology: "The basic interest of the class struggle in Israel was always reflected in an overall concept of things. It continues to be based on the true interests of the workers, and they are not tled only to wages because they are only one component of income. In order to conduct a proper wage policy, the Histadrut must act independently and at the same time seek ways to streamline its cooperation with the Government. That is not required for any formal reason. After all in both bodies the Labour Party has a majority, and representatives of the Labour Party were elected to public office in the Government and the Hista-drut on the same election platform."

NOT ONLY WAGES

However, Mr. Almogi pointed out that by considering wages as an isolated subject, the real interests of wage-earners would not be properly served. As he put it: "One can put a lot of money into one pocket and take it out from the other through taxation and fiscal policy. One can get big salary increases and cause inflation, which renders money valueless. A modern economy requires close cooperation and coordination between Governmen economic policy-making and the leaders of organized labour. This should be the main guiding force in labour relations."

· On the strike action issue, Mr. Almogi told me that while he would not advocate outlawing strikes even of civil servants, strike action should not be regarded as an

The Government had decided in admit 40,000 workers on an organized basis. In fact, Mr. Aimogisated, there were 37,000 men working in an organized fashion, but there was the problem of about 8,000 unorganized hands. Everything was being done to curb this trend and employers were being taken to court. While waiting many months for the completion of my flat, I was amazed at the time-consuming process of painting all the inside doors white. In the Western world, doors are rarely painted. They are sealed and stained in one operation. The grain is beautifully preserved, giving an ap-pearance of warmth to the room. A look at the doors being made at the plywood factory in Pardess Hanna confirms that it's a pity to hide the grain under coats of vinyl compound plastic sealer, prime flat, and finishing enamel, which is thick, easily chipped, dripped and turns yellow very soon. Western-type sealing stains can easily be made in our paint factories. This method can reduce the cost of materials, labour and time to complete. I see that some outside doors are varnished. Why are not all doors sealed

WORKING HOURS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, - Generations of workers and their leaders fought employers Jerusalem (Margate N.J.), August for shorter working hours, reducing them to 48 and progressively to 45, 40 and even fewer hours per week.

Now in Israel we have the opposite movement. Workers and shop stewards fight for the right to work longer hours and earn overtime pay, and the Government encourages this trend by giving tax privileges on the additional earnings.

Often normal work is stretched to justify working 50, 60 and more hours per week because the employee cannot make a living on his basic

Would it not be better to go back to a fair day's work for a fair day's pay?
